the Caspian. You come to us from that blessed sea, where you have restored life to the Black Sea. Our hope, gains wings, and strength is imparted to our belief that the Cross of Christ will shine upon St. Sophia. So thinks Moscow, and in this hope remains steadfast." The Emperor, in reply, said that he loved Moscow, and rejoiced to find himself within its walls on the anniversary of his coronation—a period in his life which would always be to him full of the happiest reminiscences.

THE EGYPTIAN GOVERNMENT AND THE CANAL COMPANY.

The important action against the Suez Canal Company by the Egyptian Government for Customs dues on foreign freighters, and plant used in the Canal has been decided in favour of the Government by the court of First Instance, of which Mr. Gladstone is a member. The Canal is considered to be Egyptian territory, and the right of international transit from one sea to another, and the Canal Company is therefore held liable for Customs and dues on all plant imported.

MR. SPURGEON AND MR. GLADSTONE.

Admirer Curoy, of Cardiff, a Radical opponent of Mr. Gladstone's House Rule proposals, writes that he has received the following endorsement of his views from Mr. Gladstone:—"I am sure that Mr. Gladstone will feel the wrong proposed to be done to our sister brethren. What have they done to be thus cast off? The whole scheme is as full of dangers and absurdities as it came to be. I am sure that Mr. Gladstone will believe that he is only doing justice and acting for the good of all. I consider him to be making one of those mis-

ness, which can only be made by great and well-measured steps.<sup>18</sup>

UNITED IRELAND AND THE QUEEN.

Mr. Parnell's paper, United Ireland, says:—“The abnormal activity of the Queen's Government is momentary and remarkable. It is the result of a well-defined and well-considered policy. It is the result of a policy which is based on the Rale from Loyal and Patriotic Union platforms. If there were no other reason, the populace are beginning to express their opinions at these demonstrations a little too gruffly. But it is perfectly understood that her Majesty's Government are going to do it and among her subjects are her contribution, and a very formidable contribution, to the anti-Irish crusade. Does her Majesty suppose, when one of her Ministers, the Council denounces the divine right of Princes, that the world is going to return to the divine right of Queens?”

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENTS IN ENGLAND.

The Vienna correspondent of the Times, telegraphing, says:—“The London correspondent of the New York

He calls attention to-day to warm terms to the House of Commons, in pursuance of the rules made in the time of the dynastic struggles. As there is much correspondence among Continental journalists, it becomes almost the duty of each to be conversant with the varying course with which newspaper correspondents are treated in this country to express a hope that some reciprocity will be extended to our colleagues of the foreign press in London. (It must be said, too, that the mark of fairness is not always shown by the due of the gentlemen who with so much ability represent in London the leading journal of Austria.)

STABBING A LOVER.

A young woman named Emily Griffin was charged at Bristol with stabbing Richard Miller, whose evidence was taken at the infirmary. He said he had promised to marry her, and she had been pining for him ever since. On Sunday they had some refreshment, and while out walking he lent her his knife to cut a spirit to pick her teeth. She asked him how he would like to be stabbed. He told her she should stab him in the stomach, and she said, "I'll stab him, yes," and then said, "Oh, Dick, why did

DYNAMITE EXPLOSION.—TWELVE PERSONS KILLED.

A Reuter's telegram from Madrid states that a dynamite explosion near Valencia was destroyed, recently by a manufacturer of nitro-glycerine. The accounts received up to the present state that at least 12 persons perished, and it is feared that there are other victims.

MUTINY ON BOARD THE CLARENCE.

Thirteen lads who recently mutinied on board the reformatory ship Clarence were placed on their trial at the court-martial at Portsmouth, on the 22nd inst. A conspiracy existed among the lads to escape from the vessel, but their object having been frustrated, an attempt to escape was planned for the night of the 31st January. The discovery was made on the 2nd of February, when they tried to seize a boat and violently assaulted the quartermaster and a lad named Nottan. They subsequently tried to swamp a boat containing the officers, and stabbed Porter, one of the officers, in the back.

THEY WERE REPRODUCED FROM THE COURTESY OF THE BOARD OF

THROWING RICE AT WEDDINGS

The danger of the custom of throwing rice at weddings has just been exemplified. The vicar of St. James the Less, Bethnal Green, has for many years solemnised the ceremony of marriage free to anyone who chose to avail themselves of his kindness. It is his custom to throw a shovelful of rice at the bride and groom, and to receive with a shower of rice, and to such an extent has the practice grown that the neighbouring grocers keep parcels ready packed for the occasion. The brides are generally protected by their veils; but the vicar, who is a very stout man, was yesterday when he received several grains in his eyes. When he raised his arm to shield himself a fresh tidal-wave was opened upon him.

The prisoner who escaped from custody by jumping out of a train while being conveyed from Maryborough to Penridge on Friday last was re-arrested on Saturday morning. The circumstances of the case are peculiar. It was spent in a little more than half an hour, and a sailor, who was sentenced, at the Bandhurst assizes about four years ago, to imprisonment, with hard labour, for five years, on a charge of forgery. A month in which you were to be spent in a little more than half an hour.

The prisoner, the constable in charge of him was travelling at a rapid pace, when the former awoke. They were together in one end of a carriage, when a window at the rear, opening out upon the street, was closed, and the train was over the last it. Immediately his back was turned, Proctor, rising from his seat, and handcuffed as he was, snatched suddenly himself through the window of the compartment. Nothing daunted by the speed of the train, he was able to get out, and to stand upon the platform. He probably lay helpless for some time, for the wound he received in the head must have stunned him, and the great bruises on various parts of his body are marked on the photograph. He was, however, a man of a most tolerably frank, and partly by his own narrative we are able to give an idea of how he got on after quitting his keeper. It appears that the desperate act was committed in the first place, and that he was able to get away well on in the day. He journeyed on in the direction of Footscray—seems to have wandered rather aimlessly. By midnight he got as far as a place called The Gap; and there he lay for some time, and was at last discovered. By means which he is, of course, unable to disclose, he got his manacles loosened so far that the chain which joined the handcuffs together was cut through.

man's source and substituted for the pool visit. Early in the morning the escapee paid a visit to an hotel at The Gap. An incident occurred here. He was resting in the hotel when a policeman came in and asked if he had seen anything. The man apparently recently from gaol. The landlord, not knowing of the adventure, and not knowing the man, replied in the negative. A conversation ensued, which was not very interesting, and the man left with a grudge, which he carefully maintained, quietly left. The constable did not know his man until some time later. During the morning, still in the early hours, the adventure was being narrated to a group of men in the prison recreation. He was astonished to find that they knew of his escape. They observed that "he must have had a bad fall," which he agreed with, and accounted for in a slightly prevaricating manner. The men, however, were not satisfied with this. They were somewhat frightened by the menacing attitude he assumed. Pointing the cold shell of a hand out at them, he vowed he would blow their brains out if they came near him. They kept a safe distance, and went off, saying that a desperado was at large. It was a little later in the day when Monaghan constable Ashton, of Keilor, who had been deeply shocked to look after the missing link, came up with him. He said the fellow seemed to be very much injured and very dangerous. He said to the constable that he wished he had "bumped" the lot rather than recaptured." He also remarked that in the fall from the train his head struck against a wire-post, and gave him the ugly wound he had. This he at first took to be the effects of a shot from the constable who had him in charge. He was brought on to the first train for Melbourne, and was taken to the City Watch-house in the afternoon. He stated that the constable was not to blame for his escape, for as soon as he made for the other end of the carriage he (the prisoner) made through for the door. Ashton and another of the constables were yet to run. A "solitary" term was awaiting him immediately on his return to Pentridge, and he thought of this appeared to affect him very much. He appeared very ill when he was taken to the cells, and was very much uppeared with a sort of feeling internally, from the severe shaking he got on leaping from the train.

Official candidacy, the absence of any administrative pressure, and the full freedom given to electors of every class, would sufficiently explain the success of Republican candidates; yet, really the success was not wholly the effect of those changes, but was chiefly due to the continuous movement of the country towards Republican institutions. Although in 1878 the Duc d'UMALE was suggested as a candidate for the Presidency at the end of Marshal MACMAHON's term, it was simply notorious that on the electoral field the monarchial parties could sustain nothing except hopeless struggles. This, simultaneously with the proposal that the Prince IMPERIAL and wedded the Princesses THYRA of Denmark, who indicated the existence of Bonapartist Orleanist projects equally destitute of stability and hope. The Septennate was instituted in 1878. In 1878 there remained no institution under what form of government France should live. It was, indeed, understood that the partisans of Constitutional monarchy, of the Empire, and of Legitimism had agreed to keep silent, to show no programme, and no flag; but suddenly one of the contracting parties spoke, and the very equivocal manifesto of the Comte de Chambord was substituted for the confused utterances of the Right parties, and encouraged each dynastic faction to take its place and unfurl its own flag. All this followed the events which culminated in the ice of President Grevy in 1879. Still, as REUBEN said at Grenoble, France had not entered full sail into the Pacific Ocean of Republic, albeit he declared it was high time to require obedience to a Legislature ready made, and which it was sufficient to force. Since that time he, the coming actor, has disappeared from the scene, and with him the so-called HANGI CING, the last of the Bourbons, and Prince LOUIS NAPOLEON, rising hope of the Imperialists. The attempt of CHAMBERD made no sign in favour of his cousins of Orleans, though they at once claimed the heritage of title to the Throne; the Prince IMPERIAL designated Prince NAPOLEON, the son of Prince JEROME, as his successor. Between father and son, however, differences as to prior rights me, and the Bonapartist prospects name more gravely obscured than ever.

However, the issuing of a highly pretentious manifesto by Prince JEROME exasperated Republican feeling against all the Princes resident in France, and precipitated measures against them.

It is advisable to set these matters forth,
in order to a clear understanding of the state of things at this moment, as shown by the programs recently to hand. The Comte de Paris (heir to the Orleansian throne), Prince ANTOINETTE, and other Princes have been expelled from France; and expulsion
has been followed by a proposal to confis-cate the property of the ostracised Princes.
It will be remembered that a few years ago, when the Senate refused to pass measure of expulsion, President Grévy used a decree dismissing the Orleansists from their commands in the army. Duc D'AUMALE was then exempted, but his name has now also been removed from the my List. Several futile attempts have been made to bring about the expatriation of the princes, and these have had the countenance of the PRESIDENT, who is as much in favour of their exile now as he was sixteen years ago opposed to the measure granting them permission to return to France. No further back in March last an expulsion proposal, opposed by the Government, was rejected by 320 to 183 votes; whilst an amendment for discretionary expulsion was rejected by 319 to 170 votes. It is meanwhile a marked change has taken place. Royal marriages and fetes and republicans recalling the royal splendours of past times, and exhibiting the Comte de Paris as a personage possessing magnificent untold influence, have shocked the republicans, who have lately displayed considerable feeling hostile to the Orleans family. This powerful wave of aggressive sentiment M. de FREYCINET found inconvenient to resist, and hence his action he has been compelled to take. To make confusion worse confounded, a Berlin semi-official paper published a sensational article with the heading "Orleanism is War." He asserted that the Monarchists had chosen "Jeune France" as their motto, though never able capable of that construction had been professed by one of the Princes. But in the manifesto he issued before quitting France

England the Comte de Paris declared that would labour unfruitfully for the salvation of his country, which he believed could only be saved by the restoration of Monarchy. He then expressed his readiness, when the hour arrived, to assume the responsibilities of the situation. He has thus become avowedly a Pretender as well as an exile. The Berlin paper contended that in that dread of Socialism the middle classes were driven into the arms of Orleans; yet really in saying this it portended that Orleansism restored would mean order and peace, for the middle classes in France do not desire war. Thus lectured by Berlin, and annoyed at the Orleans demonstrations, the Republicans are more frightened at the prospect of a Royal resto-tion than terrified at the Red spectre, which nevertheless constantly threatens wild work. A day may be warned now, as the Thebans in ancient days were warned,—

“ ——— that the tyranny of all
Led back to the tyranny of one.”

The more probable outcome of the downfall the Republic would be, as has been said, the wearing of the crown, if one were wanted, the GENERAL who had repressed Anarchism and restored order. A telegram received the other day intimated that General BOULANGER, the Minister for War, was suspected of making preparations for a coup d'etat. Speculation on this head would be premature. What is more to the point at present is, that the expatriation of the Princes does not necessarily mean the share of their cause in France; and that as between Anarchism and Monarchism, should the Republic be still more discredited, the balance would incline to the latter. At all events, the critical pass to which affairs have been brought cannot be regarded without anxious misgivings and forebodings, even behind the confines of the once renowned chosen home of chivalry and garden of France."

WHERE is an event now proceeding in that clant.

region, THE HAYMARKET and time FUTURE.
We must of course we mean—
THE GREAT SALE
THE GREAT SALE
now on at
ANTHONY HORDEN and SONS,
PALACE THEATRE,
HAYMARKET
(ONLY).

Although only commenced on MONDAY last, this event has stirred SOCIETY to the very depths, is the talk of every TONGUE, the theme of all.

Go where you will, THE GREAT SALE is talked about; wait where you may, all other topics are for the nonce set aside; and the HORDEN and SONS' GREAT SALE are alone the subject of conversation and remark.

Those who have not been are GOING, those who have been are going AGAIN, and as on both yesterday and Monday OVER THE TORY THE PRINCE, WAIVED THE RIGHT to STORE IN THE HAYMARKET.

We may safely assume that before the month is out all Sydney will have participated in the GREAT SALE.

And a GREAT SALE it surely is, not one of the wily-wags, half entered out arrangements that are so common in this city, but a regular end-or-nothing, unmistakable, uncompromising AFFAIR, that gives every one a share, and secures to the ample opportunities for doing a little downright PROFITABLE shopping.

ANTHONY HORDERN and SONS are thoroughly go-ahead folk.
It is quite probable that they will consider
THE PALACE EMPORIUM, HAYMARKET, is the nearest thing to Heaven in the shape of a store in these
